

BOSTON LITERARY NOTES.

THE PLANS OF HENRY L. SHEPARD & CO.—JUVENILE CLASSICS—"THE REV. MR. MURRAY OF THE TWO H. S.'S"—AMERICAN HOMES—"THE LITERARY WORLD"—NEW DEVOTIONAL POETRY—A BOOK FOR BOYS BY P. G. HAMPTON.

FROM A REGULAR CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.—
Boston, Sept. 11.—I have already written you concerning the good intentions of most of the Boston publishers, but Messrs. Henry L. Shepard & Co. have a list of which I have not yet spoken. Shepard & Co. publish the well known horticultural works of Edward R. Sand, and they announce three new ones—"The Window Gardener," "Bulbs," and "Wardian Cases and Hanging Baskets." These books are to be the first of a series of cheap horticultural books, to be substantially bound in cloth, well illustrated and printed, and sold at the marvelously low price of 30 cents each. Another new series from this firm will be what they call "The Classic Series" of juveniles—undertaken with "the hope and intention," so the publishers tell us, "of supplanting much of the trash issued for the young under the name of juvenile literature." The series will comprise about twenty volumes, in the various departments of fiction, history, natural history, and popular science. The title of the first volume, namely, "The Collier-Door Club, and Other Stories," does not sound preeminently classic, but no doubt it is entertaining, since it is by the Rev. Edward Eggleston. "The Young Moose Hunters," by C. A. Stephens, is the second "classic," and the third will be "The Mysterious Island," by Jules Verne, a story of a similar kind to "Robinson Crusoe," and we are assured, equally delightful.

Talking of "Seas," Shepard & Co. will release Mrs. Leslie's book for children—"The Little Franklin Series" and "The Robin Redbreast Series." Also they promise for small people, "Friendly Fairies," a new book of Fairy stories; and, by way of gift-book, "Little People and their Friends, a Book about Children for the Lovers of Children," edited by Mrs. Geo. L. Austin. The first part of this volume was published last season, under the title of "Little People of God"; but numerous additions will make it practically a new book.

For older people, Messrs. Shepard & Co. announce "Songs in the Night," a collection of hymns for the sick and suffering; "Iceland," by Bayard Taylor; "The Twins of St. Marcel," a tale of the Parisian Incredulity; "Assass," a New-England life study, by the Rev. Peter Pennoit; "Her Mother's Fancy," by Teresa Oakey Hall; "The Vegetable Garden," by Fearing Burr; a book about cattle by Dr. Loring; and "Logothetes," a poem, by Frank N. Lantz. Concerning this poem I know nothing but its pretentious-sounding title, and I'm sure I don't know what that means; but the publishers say it is "of Byronic power and grace," and if they don't know who that is, I do.

I must not omit to mention a new book by James M. Bailey, the "Danchury News-Man," on England; and a book by the Rev. W. H. Murray—the two aspirites of this eloquent man's name are understood to refer, the one to Horace, the other to Heaven)—on the Adironacks. The book will be in two parts, the first part humorous, the second legendary. Perhaps the most really important work of the whole I have referred to the last, namely, the "History of the United States Marine Corps" by M. Almy Aldrich, from data collected from the official sources by Capt. R. S. Collier, U. S. M. This is the only history of the Marine Corps ever written, and is the work of a well-known journalist and able marine officer. It has been carefully compared with the official records, and can be relied on as a correct and readable history of this branch of our national service. It is, as the author says, the unwritten chapter of our National history. It will be published in royal 8vo cloth extra, $5.

American Homes, the magazine published by Shepard & Co., is to be, commencing with the December number, under the editorial charge of Mr. George Cary Eggleston, the late editor of Bearh and Home. Henceforth this periodical, which has hitherto been a subscription work, will be sold to the trade.

Taking of Boston monthlies, the public ought not to forget that well-edited monthly paper, The Literary World, published by S. R. Crocker. It is winning its way to public favor surely, but more slowly than its merits deserve; for it combines with the freshest possible literary intelligence criticisms as good as those of the English publications of the same kind. It is impossible to agree always with the judgment of any reviewer, and Mr. Crocker has his prejudices as well as the rest; but there are few who are more often in the right. To subscribe to his inexpensive little monthly is to know all that is going on in American literature, with the least possible trouble—the books he praises it is safe to read, and those on which he frowns are seldom worth wasting one's time over. Mr. Crocker is also an accomplished translator, and has just been rendering into English, for Roberts Brothers, George Sand's "Ma Servante Jeanne."

Beside the numerous books of Roberts Brothers, of which I have already spoken, there will be a volume of devotional poetry, edited by Dr. A. P. Putnam of Brooklyn, N. Y., entitled "Songs and Singers of the Liberal Faith." Its contents will be unusually fresh, including many poems hitherto uncollected. The same firm will also issue another collection of a similar character, made by Mrs. J. T. Weston, and called "Quiet Hours." Philip Gilbert Hamerton has a new book to be published this Autumn, a story for boys, entitled "Harry Bount." It will deal with the school life of Old England, as Lowell's Anthony Brads with that of New-England, and will also include the story of a yacht voyage about the stormy Hebrides. We may expect a treat; for that charming, picturesque style of Hamerton's which adorns the commonest things will have a subject worthy of its skill.

They talk of hard times—all these publishers—and say no one wants to buy books; and yet they keep on making them as fast as their presses can run. L. C. M.
